Hon. Daniel M. Fox,
Superintendent

Sir: During your absence the Asst. Treas'r U. S. at New York, transferred several thousand dollars in 1¢ Brize to the Mint for redemption. At that time we had orders for cents from New York parties for five thousand dollars in value, received.

I at once reshipped the cents to the persons ordering cents from New York. We had no other, and if we had had others I think I should have done the same thing. This foolish transaction cost the government hundreds of dollars in freight, and it is not good business. Would it not be well to notify Washington of this unnecessary duplication of freights and let the authorities arrange the matter?

Very Respectfully

Hon. Dan. M. Fox,
Superintendent

Sir:

During your absence the Asst. Treasurer U.S. at New York transferred several thousand dollars in 1 cent Bronze to the Mint for redemption. At that time we had an order for cents from New York parties for five thousand dollars in value, minimal.

I above reshipped the cents to the persons ordering cents from New York. We had no other, and if we had had others I think I should have done the same thing. This foolish transaction cost the government thousands of dollars in freight, and it is not good business. Would it not be well to notify Washington of this unnecessary duplication of freights and let the authority arrange the matter?

Very Respectfully
